ly ornamented with pearls and diamonds, into the hand of the Captain of the guard to hold, while he put on a fresh turban, infinitely more rich than he wore in the procession. The King being seated on the Throne, with the sceptre in his hand, and decorated with the orders and other ornaments of royalty, under a canopy embroidered with pearls and precious stones; and on a carpet embroidered alike to match, he received the Ambassador, having on his right hand the Prince of Asturias, and on his left the Princess and other royal persons placed according to their rank; the ladies of the Court being on the side of the Princess, and the other officers of the Crown near the King, together with the Grandees of Spain, his Majesty and the latter being covered, and all in grand gala, or uniforms; on which he, the Ambassador, addressed his Majesty, by saying, "That the Sultan his Master, had sent him to assure his Majesty of his friendship, and to demand a continuation of the peace which reigned between the two Sovereigns;" to which the King replied, "That he would preserve it with the same care as he did when King of Naples." His Majesty then asked the Ambassador, "if he found everything agreeable to his wishes at the Court, and if he was content with those who had charge of his table and his household?" to which he replied, "That he was completely satisfied in every respect." After which he retired with those who accompanied him, and was re-conducted home in one of the King's carriages, with the same ceremonies, when he returned all thanks for their attendance; and after having smoked a pipe and taken coffee, he went with the officers to the Count de Florida Blanca's, where he dined with all the Ministers and Foreign Ambassadors.

His Majesty has ordered three of his coaches to be at his disposal, and has assigned him for six months the sum of 120 piastres per diem for his expenses.

Paris, Nov. 5. Notwithstanding the tranquillity and satisfaction that seem to reign over the nation in general, La Bazarie (a formidable body of attorneys and their clerks) cannot remain inactive. They loudly tax Parliament with having too easily acquiesced in registering the two twentieths, without the consent of a General Assembly of the States. The most rational part of the inhabitants, however, look upon all these broad hints of discontent and confusion, as the dangerous seeds of sedition, and the refined-quirks of the law inseparable from that restless fraternity. The patriots themselves, in high spirits, and highly extolling their Monarch's patriotic views, and his great sacrifices to the nation, have contrived by numbers the following ingenious rebas: "The beneficence of Lewis XII.

who was called the Father of his people, And the virtues of Henry IV.

are now happily met in our gracious monarch Lewis XVI."

There is a scheme on the carpet in France for suppressing the militia in every part of the kingdom. A light contribution on bachelors will answer the same purpose, and all will pay it except noblemen and priests. The person who proposes the above permutation is in a military line, and has calculated that the money arising from this contribution may be sufficient for adding seventy-five thousand men to the army.

The execrable man, a priest, who murdered his brother, by a dagger, they say, he was guilty of his accomplice, the woman who assisted him in cutting and maiming the dead body of his unhappy brother. An inspector of the Police set out the latter end of last month in order to fetch this unnatural monster. It is thought he will be confined in the dungeon of Pierre-enfise, a prison on a steep rock, in one of the Faubourgs of Lyons, on account of a great Magistrate, who being his relation, has obtained that justice shall not be executed in public.

The following example of barbarous cruelty cannot be paralleled in any records of modern or ancient history. Some of the people at Ziericzee, who had espoused violently the Stadholder's cause, went to a fairer, and asked him if he would not be of their party. The man answered, He would sooner die than forsake the patriots: They then pulled out his eyes, opened his breast, plucked out his heart, and threw it to one another with marks of contempt and derision. They put some of his blood afterwards into a glass, and filling it with white wine, they forced his distracted widow to drink part of it. The pen recoils with horror from the subject.

Dii multa neglecti dederunt, Belgia mala luctuosa.

The Princess of Lamballe has bespoken, at an eminent milliner's, several of the neatest, and yet richest, hats à la Prince d'Orange, as presents for some persons of high rank in England, from whom she had received the most flattering marks of attention on her late visit to that kingdom.

L O N D O N, — Nov. 14.

Yesterday the King, Queen, and the three eldest Princesses, came from the Queen's House at Windsor to Kew Palace, where the Royal Family dined en famille; and where they will continue their residence till Friday, when they return to Windsor.

The Prince of Wales and the Duke of York enjoyed a very capital day's pheasant-shooting on Saturday last with Mr Rigby, at Millley, in Essex: On Monday they went on a similar expedition to Walton, another manor of Mr Rigby's, a delightful situation, on the German ocean, where there is game in the utmost abundance; and consequently the royal brothers met with the highest diversion.

Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, and the Duke of York, arrived yesterday evening at Carleton-house, from the hospitable mansion of Mr Rigby, where their Highnesses have been since Saturday last.

Early on Monday morning arrived at Gloucester-house, in Upper Grosvenor-street, their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester from the Continent. The Duke set out at eleven o'clock in the forenoon to pay his respects to the Majesties at Windsor.

The Duke of Gloucester has received an addition of 5000 l. a year to his income, which his Majesty has thought fit to grant him, from the motive of the necessary increase in his expenses by his children being grown up. The addition is to be on the Irish establishment.

Both the children of the Duke of Gloucester are provided for by Parliament. Prince William's salary is 8000 l. per annum; that of his sister, the Princess, 6000 l. per annum. This was done in consequence of a message sent to the Houses of Lords and Commons, a few sessions since, when Lord North was premier, and at the same time that the King's younger children had a parliamentary stipulation for their support on the demise of the King.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Gloucester is expected to be at the Queen's Drawing-room at St James's on Thursday next, which will be the first time for some years.

The Duke of Gloucester and his family are arrived from the Continent; and we have the pleasure to announce, that from a complete good understanding that has now taken place between every part of the Royal Family, there will be in future no occasion for either of the King's brothers to seek a continental residence.

The Duchess of Gloucester, it is whispered, is again pregnant, which was one reason of bringing the family to England sooner than had otherwise been intended, the ensuing spring having been fixed for the period of their return.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Gloucester's health is, if we may judge from appearance, completely re-established; the Duke looks fat, and that seraficness, bordering upon gloom, with which he seemed to be affected, before he went abroad, is completely worn off.

It was currently mentioned yesterday evening, that the vessel bound for this port, which conveyed the furniture, equipage, &c. of the Duke of Gloucester, had foundered in a violent gale off Boulogne, and was totally lost. The account adds, that the vessel was a large vessel of near 700 tons; and what is still more to be regretted, that there were a great number of passengers on board, but whose names are yet unknown.

A Treasury warrant is signed for a second payment of 40,000 l. to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, in the same proportions as the former payment, viz. 30,000 l. towards the liquidation of his debts, and 10,000 l. for going on with the works at Carlton-house.

The Hon. Mr Ryder (son of Lord Harrowby, and Member for Tiverton) is to move the Address to his Majesty in the Lower Assembly, on the meeting of Parliament. In his late visits to Holwood, he has received several lessons from the Minister. With talents less conspicuous than those which report give of the above young gentleman, there can hardly be a doubt, under such able tuition, of his making no inconsiderable figure in the maiden display of his oratorical powers.

In case of the demise of Mr Todd, whose health is much on the decline, we are well informed that in consequence of an engagement with Ministry some time since, the Post Office by Mr Palmer, without either the salary or the perquisites of the former.

Yesterday morning Lord Howe arrived at his house in the Admiralty, from his seat at Langar in Nottinghamshire. His Lordship was sent for in consequence of the dispatches received on Monday from Commodore Cosby, who commands in the Mediterranean.

An officer of a frigate at Portsmouth, in a letter of the 11th instant, writes thus: "We were to have sailed this day for Portsmouth, but are detained in consequence of the arrival of a frigate from the Straights, with news of the Spanish fleet being out."

Extract of a letter from Portsmouth, Nov. 11.

"I have but just time to relate the news of the day: this morning his Majesty's ship Southampton, Captain Smith, arrived here from Gibraltar, with dispatches for Government; immediately on his landing, he waited on Admiral Lord Hood, to communicate his intelligence to him, which after receiving, his Lordship thought fit to make the signal for all cruizers, in order to bring back the Powerful and Cailloden of 74 guns each, who had weighed anchor, and were then working out to St Helen's, in their way to Plymouth. The Bombay Castle and Carnarvon, that had dropped down from Spithead to St Helen's a few days before, were also called in by the same signal, and have brought up again at Spithead—this does not a little stagger us, and gives us reason to believe, war is at no great distance off—Thanks to the blundering behaviour of our wife Ministers."

It is understood that the Admiralty Board means to support the half-pay officers on the surgeon and matter's list, in their application to Parliament the ensuing session, for the half pay to be extended to the whole in future, and not to be continued to a fixed number only as at present.

The case of the Surgeons and Masters of the Royal Navy is really hard, if strictly considered. The first are obliged to provide a medicine chest, with instruments, &c. at the expense of from 70 l. to 120 l. according to the size of the ship to which they are appointed; the latter are obliged to have maps, charts, and nautical instruments, according to the late-failing instructions, at a great expense. Many have been called upon and not appointed; others have been commissioned, and after a month's service, are now discharged. The answer from Lord Howe has been no redress.

Amongst the members of opposition who speak well of Mr Pitt's late conduct, is to be ranked Mr Fox, who, with great manliness, speaks out to the trials of the Minister in all companies. His fairer is, "He has shown the wisdom and spirit of rather in his best days."

Not one ship of the line, or frigate, has been ordered to be put out of commission. This tends to prove the uncertain light in which the affairs of France are considered by our Ministry.

The King of France has ordered 200,000 livres, to be issued for the relief of the Dutch Patriots, who have been obliged to fly their country.

The Brussels Gazette says, that the King of Prussia has lent 30,000 men to the Czaria, who are to march through the Emperor's dominions—but without arms.

The Prussian troops have not yet evacuated Holland, nor do they mean to do so, until the Helian troops with General Fauchet shall arrive. These troops are to be taken into the pay of the States.

An accommodation is already talked of between the Turks and their opponents in the North. That such an accommodation will take place is far from improbable; as the Emperor has always been found more ready to talk than to fight. His Imperial Majesty has, however, vanquished several priests and priors!

The two Chairs and a Committee of the Bank Directors had a conference with Mr Pitt, on the subject of supplying the deficiencies of Government this year without a loan, when, according to rumour, it was finally arranged, as we have stated, that no money was to be borrowed by a public loan, the Bank agreeing to advance the sum that should be found deficient, which Mr Pitt stated to be from one million to 1,500,000 l.

On Saturday last two lame ducks, one of them a Simon Pure, and the other a Clerk to a great trading company, waddled from the Stock Exchange, both being crippled very much, by a great load of Irish and English Lottery Tickets falling on them, together with a bundle of speculative accounts for Stock.

We are happy to hear that Lord Mansfield is again getting well, both in regard to health and spirits. He is doing that too, "which should accompany old age," acting well. Amongst other instances which we could quote, he last week heard of Ross the player's accident of breaking his leg, and that he was to have a benefit at the Royalty Theatre, when his Lordship sent him fifteen guineas for a ticket.

Bon Mot of Lord Mansfield.—In an action tried before his Lordship, brought by a special pleader against a horse-dealer, for selling him an unwieldy horse, it appeared in evidence that the horse turned refly when the plaintiff mounted him.—His Lordship observed to the jury, that he supposed the horse felt a special pleader on his back, and therefore demurred.

The late worthy Prelate of Chester, who is translated to the vacant See of London, was, in the early part of his academical pursuits, Bearer of the University of Cambridge, which office required him to carry the mace before the Vice-Chancellor, in his public procession to church. But Mr Porteus's classical production, which gained him Newton's prize, soon elevated him from a situation so unworthy of his superior talents, and probably laid the foundation for that well-earned fame, which afterwards raised him to a mitre.

Monday morning, about ten o'clock, the remains of the late Dr Lowth, Bishop of London, were he died, to Fulham Church, in a hearse followed by two mourning coaches, in which were four friends, and after the usual ceremony in the church, were interred in the Episcopal vault, near the remains of his predecessors. The burial was in the most plain and private manner, according to his will. A benefaction has been left to the poor of Fulham parish.

On Saturday morning died, raving mad, Mr Thomas Wood, master of the Assembly house at Kenilworth Town. This unfortunate man was the object professed by the late Sir Thomas Davenport, for a highway robbery. He was most honourably acquitted, without even a reference to the jury; and it came out afterwards, to the fullest conviction, that Wood was perfectly innocent of the fact, and that two men, since executed, (one before Newgate, and the other in Surrey), had committed the robbery. The poor man, in consequence of his long confinement in Newgate, and the severe effect of his feelings, had epileptic fits from the day of his discharge, and became more and more indolent, till the time of his fatal catastrophe.

Monday the Session for the High Court of Admiralty was held at the Old Bailey, when five prisoners were capitally convicted, viz. Thomas Johnson, John Ross, and John Thompson, alias Cannam, late mariners on board the ship Garland, lying at Cape Padrone, on the coast of Africa, for piratically and feloniously seizing, taking, and running away with a certain French corvette, or schooner, called the Pourvoyeuse, on the high seas, about two leagues from the said Cape; Henry Parlane and George Steward, who were mariners on board the Ranger Indianman, Capt. Elliston, for feloniously and piratically, upon the high seas, about the distance of 100 leagues from the island of St. Agony, near the coast of Africa, conspiring, combining, and confederating with others, mariners in the said ship, to steal, take, and run away with the same, and the goods and merchandize therein, to a very great value. Three were acquitted, and three discharged by proclamation.

A correspondent, upon whose intelligence we may depend, has informed us, that the following extraordinary and melancholy accident happened within these few days at Liverpool.—An officer had formed a very warm attachment to a young lady of the place, and, with her consent, had made proposals to her friends, which were not accepted. The lover however still persevered, and finally prevailed on the young lady to elope with him. The evening was fixed, and circumstances arranged. She was to escape from the window of her bed-chamber, for which purpose a ladder was provided. The la-

SALMON FISHERIES, TO BE LET.
UPON Friday the 7th day of December 1787, betwixt the hours of four and five afternoon, within the house of John Burt, victualler, in Perth,
The WHOLE FISHERIES in the River TAY, belonging to John Hay Balfour, Esq. of Leys, are to be Let, by public roup, for a number of years, to commence at the earliest fishing season.
The Fisheries are of great extent, stretching along the River betwixt the lands of Carpow and the P. of Leys, being about a mile and a half in length, and, by reason of Mugdrum Island lying in the middle of the River, and running nearly the same length as above, the halibut fisheries are double to those on the land side; the fishermen can set their nets on the land side, and on both sides of the Island. They have employed upwards of twenty boats in a season, and great numbers of salmon have been caught there.
The shore of Newburgh lies on the side of these fisheries, and a cellar for preserving ice could be made at a small expence, in the Back Brae of Mugdrum, having a north exposure, and lying also contiguous to the fisheries. These circumstances must be of great convenience and advantage, such as would send the salmon fresh to the London market, and a vessel, generally, in every eight or ten days, sailing from Newburgh for London.
Any person inclining to make a private bargain, may see in their proposals betwixt and the day of roup, to the proprietor at Mugdrum, by Perth.
